

Selected Student Comments

Victor David Bernal Pavas

Department of Economics, University of Houston

Course: Principles of Microeconomics (ECON 2302)

Role: Main Instructor

Institution: University of Houston

Term: Fall 2024

Instruction Mode: Face-to-Face

The following are selected anonymous student comments from course evaluations for Principles of Microeconomics.

Clarity and Application of Economic Concepts

“Professor Bernal did a great job of teaching concepts in a way that we could not only understand but apply.”

“The strengths of this class was the professor’s outstanding knowledge of the subject. He explained concepts using real world examples making it easy to understand the topic.”

Organization and Preparation

“The professor was organized and came prepared for every class. He incorporated real-life examples into the lectures, which helped me understand the material better.”

“The class was well organized, with clear expectations outlined in the syllabus. The instructor was approachable and encouraged class discussions, which made the material more engaging. The use of real-world examples helped to connect theory to practice, making the content easier to understand.”

“The professor’s ability to get straight to the point when teaching and cover the relevant and important information without jumping through hoops or including unnecessary stuff.”

Engagement and Participation

“I like the professor’s way of teaching. He encourages the class to participate by asking engaging questions.”

“There was a lot of participation in class which helped understand each topic better.”

Accessibility, Support, and Professionalism

“Yes, I would recommend this instructor. He is knowledgeable, passionate about the subject, and genuinely cares about students’ success. The instructor provided useful feedback on assignments and was always willing to help during office hours or via email.”

“Yes, this instructor is very calm and seems collected. He is very easy to talk to and has a very professional demeanor. He was able to answer any question given to him in class and was able to explain his material.”